

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO YOUR LEGACY?

September Pay Day Pointers

PROTECT THE ONES YOU LOVE

As we celebrate Heritage Month, take a moment to consider what legacy you will be leaving your children. Have you ensured that your will is up to date so that your children and loved ones will benefit from your life's work when you are no longer here to care for them?

Mahatma Gandhi said: "The future depends on what we do in the present." What you do today determines what the future will hold, not only for yourself, but also for your children. And some things, such as drafting and regularly updating a valid, properly worded will, can simply not be left for tomorrow. Tomorrow may be too late.

Your will could well be the most important document you will ever draw up. It is the document that ensures that your assets - the legacy of your life's work - are inherited by the right people in the right way.

If you die without a valid will, an executor will be appointed by the Master of the Supreme Court, which means the intestate succession act will determine how your assets are distributed.
